

Christopher T. Wilcox

Leadership & Experience

Christopher Wilcox brings a wealth of experience garnered from decades of real-life law enforcement experience. Prior to retiring from the Massachusetts State Police as a Lieutenant Colonel overseeing the Division of Homeland Security and Preparedness, rose through the ranks of the MSP overseeing many high-profile functions within the Department.

Tenure As A Detective Lieutenant

During his tenure as a Detective Lieutenant, Wilcox served six years as an investigator within the Department Internal Affairs Section. There he was trusted with investigating some of the most serious allegations of misconduct made against members of the Department. During that timeframe, he was selected by the Department to attend the F.B.I. National Academy, graduating with the 258th N.A. Class.

Promotions From Captain To Lieutenant Colonel

Upon being promoted to Captain, Wilcox was selected to command the State Police Detective Unit attached to the Hampden County District Attorney's Office in Springfield. He had previously served in this office as a Trooper where he successfully resolved numerous homicides over the course of six years.

Wilcox spent the latter portion of his career working out of General Headquarters in Framingham. As a Detective Captain and a Major, Wilcox oversaw the numerous investigative units within the Division of Investigative Services across the Commonwealth. During his tenure in Framingham, he earned a certification from FLETC as a Use of Force Instructor and served as the President of the Department's Use of Force Review Committee.

Later, Wilcox was then promoted to Lieutenant Colonel of the Division Commander of Homeland Security and Preparedness, LTC Wilcox oversaw the day-to-day operations of some of the Department's most high-profile units including the Air Wing, Fusion Center, F.B.I. Joint Terrorist Task Force, Cyber Crimes, and Watch Center.
